COMMERCE AND FINANCE

"Forty years' experience has taught me that unusual conditions reverse opinions. This is not the time to buy bonds with limited incomes, but rather the opporunity to buy speculative stocks that offer the probability of increased income. Money today is abnormally cheap, for reasons that should be apparent to every Emergency currency and clearingyouse certificates provided almost unlim ted funds for current requirements. This was followed by the starting of the Fed-eral reserve system, which provided infla-tion estimated at several hundred millions, and this has coincided with the slackening in mercantile business, which has released many additional millions of idle cupital. All this has occurred at a time when demands for funds for speculation were abnormally low,' Financiers of experience are not carried away by the temporary demand for rail-road bonds. Within the next six months there are some $500,000 maturing. These must be refinanced regardless of the demands for fresh moneys by our transortation companies or the insistent ca or all available capital from foreign gov
